Learn About the Nationally-Accredited Certified Manager Program (CPM)

Maybe you've heard a little bit about CPM already. Perhaps your boss or co-worker has graduated from the program and you'd like to know more. Here is your opportunity! The next cohort starts in January, so now is the time to learn if CPM is right for you.

CPM is an intensive learning experience designed for supervisors, managers, executives, management staff, and project managers from federal, state, county, and local governments. The program includes discussion, traditional classroom experiences, and on-line learning. Participants also complete one job-related team project, which gives them the opportunity to apply theories, principles, and/or techniques learned in the CPM program to a situation, problem, concern, or opportunity in a public organization.

The State of Iowa CPM program has over 200 graduates. If you are looking for professional development that is tailored to the public sector employee, this may be right for you. Join us for 30 minutes to learn more about the CPM program, how it qualifies towards nine graduate hours at Drake University's MPA program and what it can mean to your professional career.
